Dear President Reece:

The Prince George's County Department of Corrections' Officer of the Year is Master Sergeant Larry Brunson, who has been with the Department of Corrections for 21 years. Master Sergeant Brunson's work ethic, self-motivation and attendance has resulted in him being viewed as a leader among his colleagues. While working at the gate, perimeter and reception, he exhibited excellent communication skills with the public and epitomized what public safety stands for. Along with serving as a firearm instructor, Master Sergeant Brunson has also served as an Honor Guard member for 15 years. He has represented the Department during funerals, memorial services, graduations, Washington Redskins games, official government events and drill competitions.

In his current role as a supervisor in the Special Operations Division, Master Sergeant Brunson uses his more than 15 years of experience on the Emergency Response Team to teach new members the essential knowledge and mannerisms needed to handle and respond to emergency events in a correctional setting. Master Sergeant Brunson is a dependable, security-minded and self-motivated officer, who is always willing to help, train and mentor others. He has truly transcended the position of a complete correctional officer. For these reasons and many more, Master Sergeant Larry Brunson is the Prince George's County Department of Corrections' 2019 Officer of the Year.

Sincerely,

Mary Lou McDonough
Director
